Johnny Bryan, jr., Dies In Auto Accident

Johnny Bryan, jr., 25, son of Mrs. Pearl Bryan, 4865 Saratoga avenue, was killed instantly Sunday night in an auto accident, when the auto which he was driving skidded and failed to round a curve on the Murray dam cut-off road.

Three other persons in the car who were severely injured were, Miss Willy Brazier, fractured shoulder and bruises; Miss Laurena O'Donnell, a former student at Point Loma High, two fractured ribs and bruises; Robert F. Carter, minor injuries.

Bryan was owner of the Gay Paree night club at Union and 'B' streets, which he equipped and has been running for only a few months. He had lived a good part of his life at Ocean Beach and San Diego and had attended the local schools when a boy. His father, John C. Bryan, preceded the young man in death, November, 1933.

Private funeral services were held in the Bradley-Woolman chapel Wednesday at 10 a. m., under auspices of Point Loma Lodge No. 620 F. & A. M. Rev. W. S. Dunn officiated.

To mourn his loss are his mother, Mrs. Pearl Bryan, and sister Betty Jane Bryan, of Ocean Beach.

OCEAN BEACH SCHOOL

It is nearing the end of another semester which means that everyone in school is thinking of promotions. All the children are hoping to pass into a higher grade and most anxious are those children in the H6 grade who expect to enter Junior High on February 4th, 1935. The present H6 class is especially fortunate in being the first class to hold its promotion exercises in our new auditorium. A preliminary announcement of the program is as follows: Kindergarten orchestra, "Bon Voyage", address to the H6 group by some pupil in the L6 grade, farewell address by a member of the H6 class, and a promotion talk by Mr. Barbour.

The H6 paper will soon be ready for distribution. Children in this grade have been working very hard to make it one of the best papers to be printed at Ocean Beach school. Raymond (Skeeter) Malcolm is the editor of his class paper.

Several new children came to Ocean Beach school this week. Madeline Harris of Santee entered Miss Lipp's room, James Burford transferred from Washington school and enrolled in Miss McCabe's class, Phyllis and Francis Davis, formerly of Oakland, enrolled in the L4 and H2 classes respectively.

Two or three classes have gone on excursions this week in connection with their social studies. Miss McCabe's children have visited the Cudahy Packing company, Winter's Bakery, and the Union-Tribune office, going in groups of 8 or 10 at a time after school. Miss Turrentine's class went to the Zoo Friday morning which helped them in their study of the Zoo.

The H6 class left Tuesday afternoon to visit the U. S. S. Langley, anchored off North Island. At each pro-

FORMER MEMBER KIWANIS HERE IS GUEST SPEAKER

Myron Insko was chairman of the day at Kiwanis luncheon Wednesday having for his speaker, MacLean Wilson, several years ago a member of the Ocean Beach club, who took for his subject "Kiwanis and You".

The visitor gave a very interesting talk about his long membership in the organization and how he had seen its objectives grow from that of a jolly luncheon club to one with high ideals and motives that would be a credit to any altruistic personage. He said the present trend of Kiwanis was that it should take an active interest in government, local, state and national, not as a political organization, but in an honest effort to help improve general government and to help find better and truer men to fill public offices.

Kiwanis gives the opportunity for the individual member to render unselfish personal service in many ways, such as work for underprivileged children, vocational guidance for the young people of the community, and for the quickening in one for a spirit of friendliness and civic pride. Kiwanis stands for the Golden Rule in action, and its motto "We Build" refers in part to the development of the minds and hearts of its members.

Mrs. Heber Hartvigsen sang two numbers "Robin on the Apple Tree" and "Gray Days", as a part of the program.

Floyd Johnson, past president of the East San Diego club was a visitor.

DOG POISONER EXTREMELY CARELESS

The first of this week, W. G. Powell of 4812 Cape May avenue, lost a much loved wire haired terrier, thru strychnine poisoning put out in a meat loaf, apparently with the full intention of poisoning another dog of the same neighborhood, the other dog also receiving some of the same meat and expiring from the result of the poison.

The baked meat loaf was found in several places of the neighborhood with strychnine in the center of the loaf; and while the Powell dog was out of the house only a few minutes while the owners were laying a rug, it came in from outside, was seen to be in distress and antidotes given but without beneficial effect.

While it is easy to realize some dogs are a nuisance, both to the owners and neighbors, there are others who are much loved in the homes where they are kept as pets, and any person who stoops to such a despicable way of getting even should be punished in our courts.

Supposing young children of the neighborhood had picked up a part of this meat loaf and eaten it, which could easily have happened in the same neighborhood, there would then have been a human life at stake, and the poisoner could have been charged with murder, if found.

motion time the H6 children visit some place of interest as one of their H6 activities.

George N. Speer Sells Home--Buys Another Rothermel Starts New Home on Saratoga Ave

H. S. Remington, sergeant major U.S.M.C., retired, and wife have become permanent residents of Ocean Beach by the purchase of a home at 4228 Muir avenue from George N. Speer, quartermaster sergeant U.S. M.C. retired. Sergeant major and Mrs. Remington arrived here from Washington D. C., where Mr. Remington was on duty as a secretary in the office of Secretary of the Navy Swanson. The Remingtons though new comers to Ocean Beach are well known to many of the officers and enlisted men of the Marine Corps, both active and retired, who are on duty at the Marine Base or residing in Ocean Beach and have received a number of warm greetings in the short time they have been here. Mrs. Remington will be a welcome and valuable addition to the colony of wives of the service and retired service men here.

Quartermaster sergeant and Mrs. Speer will continue to live in Ocean Beach, residing at 4761 Del Monte avenue in a home purchased from the Bay City Building and Loan Company. Capt. Henry Lancaster, U.S.A. retired, Ocean Beach realtor, was the negotiator and guiding genius in both of the above transactions.

Cords To Move Factory To Kraft Building.

Cords Piston Ring Co., has leased a store room at 1883 Bacon street in the Kraft building, next door to Gene Henderson's transfer office and Jordan the plumber.

This progressive business will no doubt prove of very much benefit to Ocean Beach for they operate over all the United States, Canada and in several foreign countries. The company for a year or more has been located in the Five Points section. One of their largest manufacturing plants is at Grand Island, Nebraska.

HAL T. JOHNSON, MEMBER OF UNION STAFF, EXPIRES

Hal Tryon Johnson, 41, a member of The San Diego Union editorial staff since 1928, died early Sunday in his home at 4869 Lotus St., Ocean Beach. Death was due to heart disease from which Mr. Johnson had suffered for about three years.

Mr. Johnson apparently was in excellent health when he left The Union office Friday night for his customary day off on Saturday. On Saturday he was with friends thru out the day and remarked several times about his health being much better than it had been in several weeks.

Mr. Johnson was born in Rockford, Mich., and went to Grand Rapids when he was a boy and received his education there. He started newspaper work about 15 years ago, and for several years was on the editorial staff of the Grand Rapids Press.

Upon coming to San Diego early in 1928 Mr. Johnson joined the editorial department of the San Diego Independent and later The Union staff.

Mr. Johnson is survived by his widow, Mrs. Helen Johnson; a daughter, Betty Johnson; a son, Thomas Johnson, of Grand Rapids; his mother, Mrs. Gertrude Vandenberg, San Francisco, and his grandmother, Mrs. Adelaide Tryon of Edgerton, Mich.

LOCAL PHYSICIANS FORM ASSOCIATION

The physicians of Ocean Beach, Doctors, Eby, Gilmer, McDonald and Wilhoit, we are informed have recently formed an association for the general betterment of their profession and a closer working relationship. One of the objectives of the organization will be the proper control of credit and the extension of a limited amount of credit to those patients who do not abuse this privilege.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy E. Rothermel, 4471 Green street, recently purchased a fifty-foot lot at 4475 Saratoga avenue, and P. M. Burrows, local builder, has started the construction of a frame-stucco residence to cost from $4,000 to $5,000.

Mr. Rothermel is in the Navy and we are told has made his headquarters here for the past 15 of 16 years. As the Rothermels owned their home on Green street and now have decided to build a better one in a place where they have an unexcelled view of bay and ocean they are no doubt satisfied that Ocean Beach is one of the best places in the world in which to stake their future.

Mr. Burrows tells us that building prospects are now much brighter than they have been for several years and that he has a number of places under consideration.

BILL ASKS MISSION BAY BE CONVERTED INTO YACHT HARBOR

Development of Mission bay as a small yacht harbor and recreation spot is proposed in a bill which Assemblyman Ralph W. Wallace, 78th district will introduce to the state legislature.

The plan is for dredging of the entire bay to a depth which will allow small yachts to navigate therein, the construction of a safe entrance so craft may sail in and out of the proposed harbor safely and conveniently, and the use of the material sucked from the bay bottom by the dredges to improve the state owned land surrounding the bay.

"The project would give San Diego a real yacht harbor—something it has needed for years—and be the means of attracting many rich boat owners to San Diego. It would also be the last port of entry for boats headed into southern waters," said Wallace in discussing his plan. "San Diego bay is now full of naval and commercial vessels, and there is little room left for pleasure craft."

Under Wallace's plan, the project would not call for a state appropriation, the funds coming from state and federal moneys already appropriated for relief.

"Many thousands of dollars would be expended in making the bay a real yacht harbor, thus furnishing employment for a large number of men for many months," he said.

The bill also proposed to create a state board of recreational commissioners for Mission bay, composed of five members appointed by Gov. Merriam for four-year terms. The board members would serve without compensation.

FUNERAL SERVICES HELD FOR RESIDENT OF FIFTEEN YEARS

Funeral services were held yesterday at 2 p. m. for Elliott F. Smith, 4754 Niagara avenue, who passed away Monday, January 21st. Mr. Smith had been a resident in Ocean Beach with his family for the past fifteen years. He was aged 61. Rev. W. S. Dunn officiated at the services. Deceased was the husband of Daisy E. Smith, father of Mrs. Florence Bates, brother of D. M. Smith of National City and Homer A. Smith of Washington, D. C.; grandfather of Clark Elliott Huston, Eula Huston of Ocean Beach.

ALFRED R. COBB WINS HONOR AT NAVY, STATION

Alfred R. Cobb, son of D. R. Cobb, 4645 Saratoga avenue, Ocean Beach, has been selected weekly honor man of his company at the naval training station it was announced Wednesday. Designation of "honor man" means that Cobb's work was outstanding in a group of approximately 139 men. Honor men are selected because of their neat personal appearance, initiative and ability to profit from instruction.

SPANISH GARDEN for EXPO HOLC Loans California Over $100,000,000

SAN DIEGO, Jan. 22.—As a special highlight of the California Pacific International Exposition, the finest private garden in Spain is being faithfully reproduced for the first time in America, it was announced here today by Richard S. Requa, supervising architect of the Exposition.

"In the little town of Ronda, about 100 miles north of Gibraltar, there is an old villa, the Casa del Rey Moro, or House of the Moorish King, built before 1485; its present owner the Duchess of Parcent, spared no expense in the addition of the garden," Requa said. "Several years ago I had the pleasure of visiting the mansion and obtained photographs of the garden, which we are reproducing."

Sweeping down from the Palace of Hospitality, where distinguished visitors will be entertained, the Moorish garden is composed of three terraces, with fountains, pool, grotto and benches of brilliant tiles. No grass is used but large areas, encompassed by boxwood hedges, are set aside for bedding. Forty foot pergolas at both ends of the upper terrace provide an attractive setting for open air dining while glimpses, thru a grove of pe-

Loans made in California by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation now have passed the $100,000,000.00 mark. Including the week ending January 17 there have been 37,249 loans closed, with an aggregate of $100,551,875, it is announced by W. O. Miles, state manager. Of this, 25,230 loans for $67,784,751, were in the Los Angeles District.

From September, 1933, when the Corporation made its first loan in this state, there has been a steady growth both in the number of loans granted distressed home owners and in the amount advanced, until now each has reached a record height.

First in California to secure a loan were John E. and Mrs. Nancy Fay, 151 West Fifty-fourth Street, Los Angeles, who September 25, 1933, were allotted $1794 to refinance their mortgage, which was held by Mrs. Peggy S. Buck, who thereby became the first California holder of HOLC bonds.

CURRENT EVENTS PASS IN REVIEW

EIGHT AND A HALF BILLION DOLLAR BUDGET OFFERED BY THE PRESIDENT.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
© Western Newspaper Union.

BECAUSE work relief must be carried on the federal budget will not be balanced for the coming fiscal year, and probably not for several years thereafter. In presenting the budget to congress, President Roosevelt admitted this, but without qualms. He estimated $8,520,000,000 as the amount of money necessary to carry on the government's activities for the 1936 fiscal year beginning July 1 next. The expenses for the current year, partly estimated, are $8,581,000,000.

If one wishes to know who spends all these huge sums, an idea may be obtained from these figures showing the estimated expenditures for the fiscal year 1936:

1. Legislative, judicial and executive	$6,595,000
2. Civil departments and agencies	788,057,143
3. National defense	792,484,265
4. Veterans' pensions and benefits	704,885,500
5. Debt charges: Interest	$75,000,000
Retirements	636,124,000
Refunds	64,946,200
7. Recovery and relief	4,582,011,475
8. Supplemental items (for above groups 1 to 4 inclusive)	40,000,000
Total expenditures	$8,520,413,508

Total receipts for the same period are put at $3,901,904,639, so the estimated deficit will be $4,618,508,869.

Of the recovery and relief fund the President asked that $4,000,000,000 be placed at his disposal to be allocated by him "principally for giving work to those unemployed on the relief rolls."

Here are some other vital things disclosed by the message:

The national debt will increase from $31,000,000,000 at the close of this fiscal year to $34,239,000,000.

No new taxes are requested. Congress is asked to continue the so-called nuisance taxes which expire soon and the 3-cent stamp rate.

A national defense appropriation of $899,948,065—the greatest in the history of the country—is requested.

A total of 137,134 federal workers are to be dismissed.

The $2,811,000,000 gold profit has not been disturbed.

Veterans pensions in 1936 will reach the staggering total of $704,000,000.

The accumulated New Deal deficit for three years on June 30, 1936, will total $11,700,000,000.

While the trend of recovery and relief expenditures is downward, regular federal expenses will increase. This is due in part to a 5 per cent pay restoration for federal workers which involves $65,000,000.

It seemed certain that some of the President's proposals would start bitter fights in congress. Old line Republicans insisted that such "squandering" of the nation's resources would lead to inflation and bankruptcy. The more radical legislators thought that four billions for work relief was not enough. Lots of senators and representatives resented the President's request for a free hand in allocating that fund, feeling he was infringing on their prerogatives. But the administration forces in congress are so overwhelming that there was no doubt that the budget would be accepted as presented.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT in his message to congress, delivered in person at a joint session, offered the law-makers a "new and greatly enlarged plan" of work relief. He did not estimate its cost, but asserted that the system of outright doles should be dropped and the government should undertake projects of slum clearance, grade crossing elimination and other public works that would give employment to about 3,500,000 persons now without jobs. The figures to be proposed for this were reserved for his budget message, but he assured congress that they would be "within the sound credit of the government."

Mr. Roosevelt declared the gains made in the year 1934 were greater than the losses and expressed "a strong hope in the coming year." He reasserted his belief in the "profit motive" but uttered a warning against wealth "which, through excessive profits, creates undue private power over private affairs, and, to our misfortune, over public affairs as well." This, naturally, was taken as applying especially to the public service interests, which have been so apprehensive of the administration's intentions.

As for a legislative program, the President made no attempt to outline one, but he did promise that definite legislation soon would be proposed covering old age and unemployment insurance, benefits for children and mothers, and other features of his social security plans.

He declared the nation was making headway toward the "new order," but under the framework of the Constitution, and he spoke of the increased industrial activity, benefits to agriculture and profits to merchants that have been realized. Then came this stern warning:

"Let him who, for speculative profit or partisan purpose, without just warrant would seek to disturb or dispel this assurance, take heed before he assumes responsibility for any act which slows our onward steps."

The President reported an unsettled condition in the foreign field, with the resurrection of old jealousies and passions and new strivings for armament and power in more than one land, adding:

"There is no ground for apprehension that our relations with any nation will be otherwise than peaceful."

Discussing the matters that will be brought before congress for action, Mr. Roosevelt said:

"Among the subjects that lie immediately before us are the consolidation of federal regulatory administration over all forms of transportation, the renewal and clarification of the general purposes of the national industrial recovery act, the strengthening of our facilities for the prevention, detection and treatment of crime and criminals, the restoration of sound conditions in the public utilities field through abolition of the evil features of holding companies, the gradual tapering off of the emergency credit activities of government, and improvement in our taxation forms and methods."

"We have already begun to feel the bracing effect upon our economic system of a restored agriculture."

"The hundreds of millions of additional income that farmers are receiving is finding its way into the channels of trade."

"The farmers' share of the national income is slowly rising. The economic facts justify the widespread opinion of those engaged in agriculture that our provision for maintaining a balanced production gave at this time the most adequate remedy for an old and vexing problem."

"For the present and especially in view of abnormal world conditions, agricultural adjustment with certain necessary improvements in methods should continue."

PETROLEUM control provisions of the National Industrial Recovery act, specifically section 9 (c), are held by the Supreme Court of the United States to be invalid as unconstitutional abdication of legislative power to the President. Eight of the justices united in rendering this decision. Justice Cardozo alone dissenting, and it was read by Chief Justice Hughes.

The section declared void authorized the President to ban interstate shipment of "hot" oil—that is, oil produced in excess of state quotas.

While the opinion did not deal with other phases of the recovery act, it aroused widespread speculation as to disposition of other cases. This was the first major "New Deal" case to come before the court. Some legal authorities pointed out that application to the act generally of the principle found untenable in this case might undo much recovery legislation.

The petroleum code itself was not involved in the decision. However, the decision was believed to finish the work of the federal tender board established as a regulation issued under authority of the provision involved.

Emergency legislation by congress to remedy the situation and to meet the objection of the court, was reported to be an immediate likelihood.

THE Seventy-fourth congress, elected on the sole issue of support of the New Deal, began its first session on the dot and devoted its first day to the organization of the two houses and the swearing in of new members.

The lawmakers assembled in the Capitol were a serious-looking lot, and with reason, for they have on their hands a big job, that of making the New Deal permanent; and in the doing of it they must solve some of the most perplexing problems that our national legislators ever have faced. It would seem that the Democrats will have no trouble in passing any legislation they wish, for they have an overpowering majority.

In the speaker's chair sits Joseph T. Byrns, chosen unanimously by his fellow Democrats. He is too much of a compromiser to suit many of them, but is now tied to the administration, which declined to oppose his election. John H. Bankhead of Alabama, like Byrns one of the old school, won the leadership of the house after a brief struggle. Senator Joseph Robinson of Arkansas was re-elected majority leader of the senate, and Senator Lewis of Illinois continues as whip.

In their pre-session caucus the Democrats voted to reduce materially the Republican representation on house committees, and decided to abrogate the 145 rule for discharging a committee and bringing a bill to vote within a week. The number now required for this action is 218.

PREMIER R. B. BENNETT of Canada, appealing for support for his administration, promises to give the Dominion a "New Deal" that bears a close resemblance to President Roosevelt's economic and social program.

Among the reforms the premier endorsed were: Contributory employment insurance, a reformed old-age pension scheme; health, sickness and accident insurance, amendments to the income tax laws to correct inequality of wealth distribution, minimum wages and maximum hours of work, and further legislation in the interests of farmers.

THERE were huge sighs of relief in the chancelleries of Europe when the success of the conversations in Rome between Foreign Minister Pierre Laval of France and Premier Mussolini was announced informally. For two days the two statesmen discussed the points at issue between their nations and conditions in general in central Europe. Emerging from the last of their meetings, Laval, smiling broadly, said to a group of French and Italian war veterans.

"I am glad to tell you that Premier Mussolini and I are now in complete accord."

Without waiting for an official communique, those best informed said Laval and duce had reached a full agreement, the principal features of which are a joint declaration to preserve the independence of Austria, a five or six power pact of noninterference, and provisions for colonial concessions in Africa. The pact agreeing not to interfere with one another's internal affairs presumably will include Italy, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, Austria, and Hungary; and later England, France and Rumania may be asked to adhere to it.

This Franco-Italian rapprochement, in the opinion of many high officials, will go far toward insuring the maintenance of peace in Europe, and in time may lead Germany to re-enter the League of Nations.

ISLANDS in the Pacific held under mandate by Japan, and which she says she never will give up though she has left the League of Nations, are virtually closed to foreign visitors, in violation of the treaty of Washington.

The permanent mandates commission of the league has reported that sums Japan announced she spent purely for civil and commercial purposes on ports on these islands are disproportionate to the volume of commercial activity. Further particulars on the expenditure were asked in the next Japanese report.

A Tokyo representative in his previous report sought to allay "suspicions" expressed in Geneva that Japan is building fortifications or constructing naval bases in the Marshall, Caroline, Ladrone or Pelew islands, granted her after the World war.

The mandates commission has issued a communique giving rise to comment in the world press, and one method of refuting them would be to afford free and unrestricted access to the islands for foreign travelers and vessels.

DEMOCRATS of Rhode Island surprised themselves and everyone else by gaining control of both houses of the state general assembly when a senate committee recounted the ballots from Portsmouth and South Kingston and declared two Democrats had been elected to the senate instead of the two Republicans who had been certified as winners by the state returning board. The Democratic legislators immediately organized the assembly, abolished the state appointed board of public safety and passed a reorganization bill to consolidate more than 80 agencies into 11 state departments.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT did not wait for the opening of congress to start his fight against immediate payment of the veterans' bonus. The commander of a Legion post in Texas wrote him for information on the matter and Mr. Roosevelt replied at length, detailing his reasons for opposing the payment. He argued that the obligation is not immediately due; that of 3,500,000 certificates outstanding, 8,038,500 veterans have borrowed $1,630,000,000, or "more than the present worth of their bonus certificates," and that when the veterans borrowed 50 per cent of the face value of the certificates in 1931 they used the funds to discharge their debts.

This last point, according to National Commander Belgrano of the American Legion, is one of the strongest arguments for immediate payment of the adjusted service certificates.

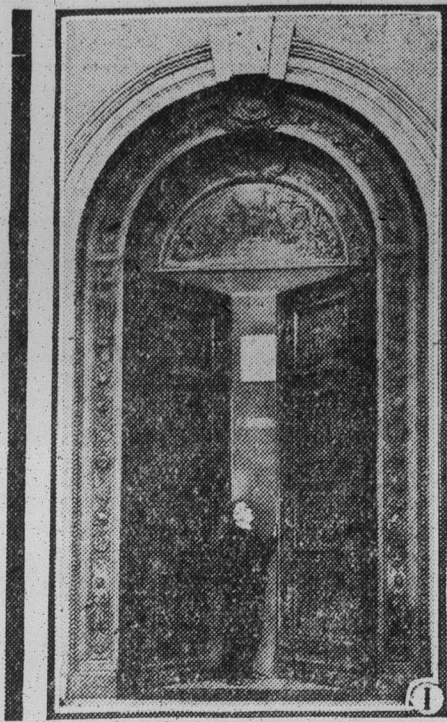

Speaker Byrns admitted that the cash bonus bill would pass the house "because there is no opposition to it there," but he added that if the measure is finally enacted the administration will insist on some additional taxation to meet the estimated $2,000,000,000 expenditure. It is believed the senate also will pass the bill, but leaders doubt its passage by congress over the Presidential veto that is regarded as a certainty.

TWO thousand eight hundred bills were introduced and referred to committees on the first day of the new congress. Number 1, handed in by Representative Wright Patman of Texas, provides for the payment of the adjusted service certificates of veterans immediately in cash through the issuance of greenbacks. Patman and other supporters of this plan call it "controlled inflation."

Leuke of North Dakota, Republican, introduced a measure for the liquidation and refinancing of agricultural indebtedness. The liquidation would be carried out at a reduced rate of interest, according to the bill, by establishing an efficient credit system, through the use of the federal farm loan and federal reserve banking system. Leuke also provided for the creation of a board of agriculture to supervise the program.

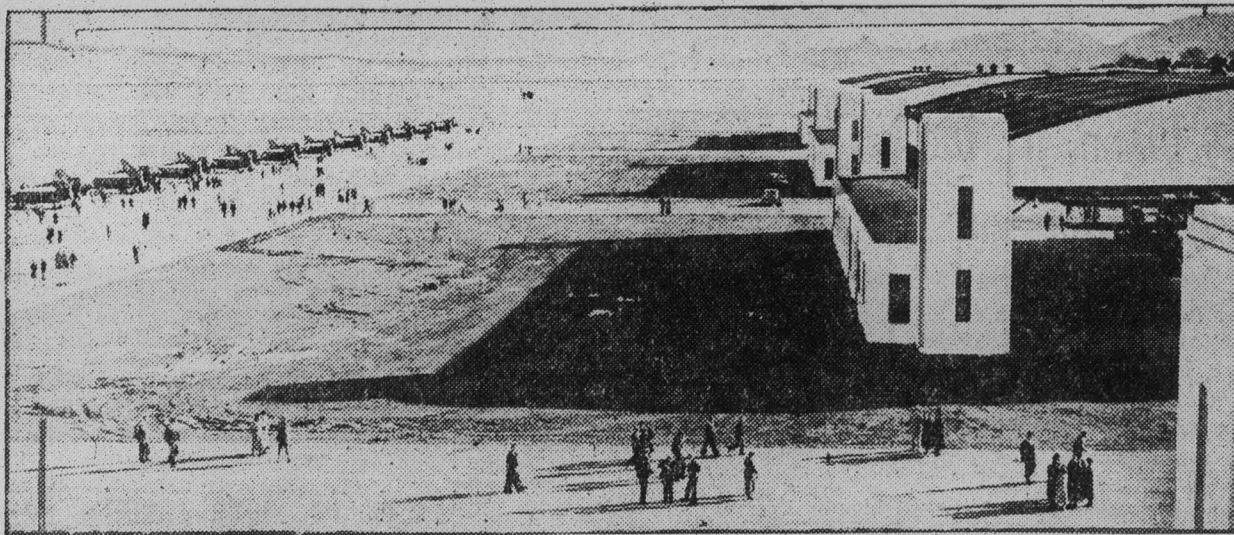

Continuance of the HOLC was proposed by several congressmen. The bond issue of this agency would be increased anywhere from one billion to four and a half billion dollars in the various bills introduced on the subject.

Tuning His Motors for Record Try

Although there is no indication that a Harmsworth challenger is in the being, Gar Wood, peer of all speedboat drivers, will not be found unprepared should one bob up. Wood is increasing the power in his huge Miss America X-motors, and intends to try for a new world record in Florida some time this winter. The photograph shows Wood looking over the superchargers of his motors. He has increased the speed of these units to provide 300 horse power more to each of the four big motors, making a total horse power of 7,000 for the craft, the most powerful power plant ever attempted in a boat.

Business Leaders Predict Recovery Early This Year

Dawes' Charts Show Prosperity on the Way.

By WILLIAM C. UTLEY

THE bluebird is back again. The harbinger of happiness, once more is just around the corner, twitting a merry tune of prosperity and plenty, all to come to us who anxiously wait, sometime in the year 1935.

At least that is what our business leaders are predicting. The depression is over, say the Big Wigs who know, and with that welcome message they have been getting every Thursday luncheon groups drunk with joy and sending business-conference sitters-in singing their ways home in hysterical glee.

Most ardent champion of the bluebird is Chicago's Gen. Charles Gates Dawes, banker, diplomat, former Vice President of the United States, and more recently sotto voce angel of his city's Century of Progress exposition. Practically all throughout the depression, General Dawes has forsaken the world-famed "Hell Maria" pipe with the subterranean bowl for a comfortable curved briar of more orthodox center of gravity. Well, he's back smoking "Hell Maria" again.

He was puffing away at a great rate on "Hell Maria" when he told Chicago's Association of Commerce at a recent luncheon that the depression was over. He said good times were coming, and even went so strong as to name the time—within six months. He not only declared recovery to be imminent. He went a lot farther. He said it was inevitable.

"Nothing can stop the progress toward it," said the general. "Just as nothing could stop the progress toward the chasm in 1929. The various steps taken by the government to aid business and employment will neither greatly retard nor greatly accelerate the return of good times."

Shuttling back and forth between an imposing display of figured charts and a microphone, the general growled, "This is a devil of a way to make a speech," but went ahead and made one, anyway. He predicted a definite boom in durable goods in May or June, and he used the charts to prove it. He refused to weep with professional economists who have been walling so long over this and that obstacle to recovery. His charts showed that the depression of 1873 and 1893 both ended five years and eight months after the original stock crashes which sent everything into a power dive.

History repeats itself, says General Dawes. After a crash the public puts off all buying, spending and investing and climbed for about a year. Although prices were not allowed to decline in the present depression, production of pig iron and steel has declined vastly more. This has resulted in a tremendous accumulated demand, which the general says will begin to be felt in large volume this summer.

Steel companies will make huge profits when this action occurs, he said, and then prices and output will become stabilized at substantially higher levels.

Not so, says a picture is that painted by Col. Leonard B. Ayres, Cleveland economist. He said the chief unsolved problem of the depression is unemployment in the durable goods industries. The three great obstacles which block the way back to normalcy are political ones, he says. They are the fear that continued governmental interference in business will make it impossible for corporations to show a profit, fear about the future of our money, and the newly revised securities act.

Only after these readjustments are made can the accumulated shortage of durable goods begin recovery, according to Mr. Ayres. This shortage, he estimated to be as much as the total output of all the durable goods industries for two and one-half years. The industries would have to operate at 25 per cent above their normal rate for ten years in order to make up the shortage.

As Dawes Sees It.

Mr. Ayres' predictions may be much more attractive than he intended them. The whole thing depends upon whether or not he is right about the attitude and action of the government. Here is what Mr. Dawes says:

"The difference between Colonel Ayres and myself is a marked one. He evidently looks upon the intervention of a changed governmental policy into the situation as being definitely determinative of the question as to whether the coming year of 1935 will mark an advance in prosperity over 1934.

"While I recognize the overwhelming long time importance of a balanced budget and wise governmental policy, I point out that the normal course of recovery involving mass action is not determined by human reasoning, but by human nature, and that the rate of recovery is following the same course in this present depression and for the same simple causes that it did in the two great former major depressions in the country, those of 1873 and 1893."

"Priming the pump" through great governmental expenditures does nothing but force an increase in business activity as long as the priming fluid lasts, he said.

The return of prosperity in 1935, if all goes well, is also looked for by Edward A. Filene, widely known Boston economist. Much depends on whether or not the Supreme court will uphold certain phases of the New Deal. He warned that if the Supreme court does not co-operate with the President, the country might be "compelled to turn to socialistic measures."

"Business is pledging co-operation with the President, and there is undoubtedly a more widespread understanding that prosperity, both for consumer goods and durable goods industries, depends basically upon the buying power of the masses. There is no telling, however, how far this promised co-operation will go and we cannot expect rapid improvement until business generally acts upon this new understanding.

Will Begin Spending.

"Congress will arrange for nationwide unemployment insurance—thoroughly sound business measures—and millions of Americans will begin to spend money which they have not dared to spend before, satisfying their long-accumulated wants and immediately stimulating business and providing more employment and more buying power. On the other hand, congress may more than undo all this good by flirting with unsound radical legislation, particularly currency inflation.

"Some industries, such as the automobile industry, are already leading the way to recovery by courageously setting out to supply the long-depressed demand for consumer goods and their success is sufficiently marked that we may expect other industries to follow suit.

"If business generally does play ball with the President, and the Supreme court does not call the game, we may find ourselves in such a crisis that the government, against its will, may be compelled to turn to socialistic measures as the only way in the emergency to keep the masses provided with the necessities of life.

"Trying to balance all factors, my expectation is:

"1. There will be some improvement during the first three months of 1935.

"2. There will be some improvement in the spring and summer over the conditions of 1934, but not enough to indicate that recovery has come.

"3. The fall will show a marked improvement and the trend from then on will be definitely upward.

"4. By the fall of 1936, we will be so far recovered as to make it generally evident that we are on the road to unprecedented real prosperity."

Upturn to Start Soon.

Business magazine and newspaper editors throughout the country agree that business will be on the upturn during the first quarter of 1935. A survey published by Associated Business Papers, Inc., indicated that the editors expected department store sales to keep up their recent gains into the first quarter, with narrow profit margins. Shoe production was only 10,000,000 pairs behind the 1929 peak in 1934, but the last year's performance is expected to be passed early in 1935. The outlook for the textile industry indicates that its business will be about 10 per cent better in 1935, according to the business editors.

Editors of automotive trade papers predicted a substantial increase for the first quarter of 1935 compared with the first quarter of 1934. In the steel industry, the steady small increase in production which has existed for the last few months is expected to be projected into the first few months of 1935. The estimated steel output of 1934 was 24,700,000 tons, an increase of 2,100,000 tons over 1933.

Machine tool trade paper editors called the prospects for both volume and profit in the first quarter exceedingly bright. Electrical apparatus wholesalers look for improvement. So does the oil industry. Although much depends on governmental policies, it is thought that the building trade might even triple the 1934 business, with remodeling on a scale twice as great as in 1934.

Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper, who should know the situation if anybody should, called the 1935 outlook "indeed very satisfactory." He predicted a sizeable upturn in the heavy goods industries.

"Every place I go," he said, "faces and features and the approach of persons indicate a more optimistic outlook than has been in evidence for some time."

Probably one of the most substantial reasons for expecting a better year in Edward Filene.

1935 is that advanced by Frederick H. Ecker, president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company.

"We can see many reassuring facts on the economic horizon," he asserted. "Among these, the outstanding one, in my judgment, is the increase in the combined national income, which for 1934, according to our economists, probably will exceed that of 1933 by something like 15 per cent. Labor income in the form of all wages and salaries in the United States is also expected to show an increase over 1933, bringing it to a total of about $33,000,000,000."

for about five years, and then goes back to work. During the period of inactivity, tremendous deficits of plant facilities and goods pile up. When all this accumulated demand is finally let loose a tremendous revival in the heavy industries is the result.

Trend Definitely Upward.

General Dawes' conclusions were the result of a study of the steel industry and other heavy industries over a period of several months. His charts showed the trend in pig iron and steel prices and the volume of pig iron production during three separate ten-year periods marked by depressions. They showed that in each depression prices slid downward for five years and eight months, then turned upward abruptly

THE PRESIDENT'S BIRTHDAY

President Roosevelt will celebrate his 54th birthday anniversary the 30th of this month, and the occasion will probably be hailed with national congratulation. From all evidence as to his physical being, he is going strong and making good as chief executive of this commonwealth. Although he uses a walking staff he is no less capable with his ability, to function in his chief capacity. In 1921, when 39 years old, apparently in the best of health, he was stricken with infantile paralysis, which permanently crippled him.

Being fifth cousin of the late Theodore Roosevelt, he is a "chip of the old block." At an early age he went through both Harvard and Columbia Universities, and was admitted to the New York bar in 1907, and drifted into politics in 1910, by being elected to the state senate. It was here where he pitted against Tammany. He rose in his political fame and became Assistant Secretary of the Navy under President Woodrow Wilson.

The year before he was stricken with infantile paralysis, he ran for vice president with James M. Cox. It was during this campaign that he exhibited wonderful oratory, while out on a campaign speaking tour. He made both nominating speeches for Alfred E. Smith for president, in the National Democratic conventions in 1924 and 1928. It was just after this that he was made Governor of New York state, serving two terms. In 1932 he was nominated President of his party on the fourth ballot and elected by a plurality of over 7,000,000 votes. His inauguration to the executive chair occurred March 4, 1933.

Mr. Roosevelt was married on March 17, 1905 to Anna Eleanor Roosevelt, a niece of the late Theodore Roosevelt. As first lady, Mrs. Roosevelt has demonstrated herself a most active worker in the welfare of society, politics and woman's organizations.

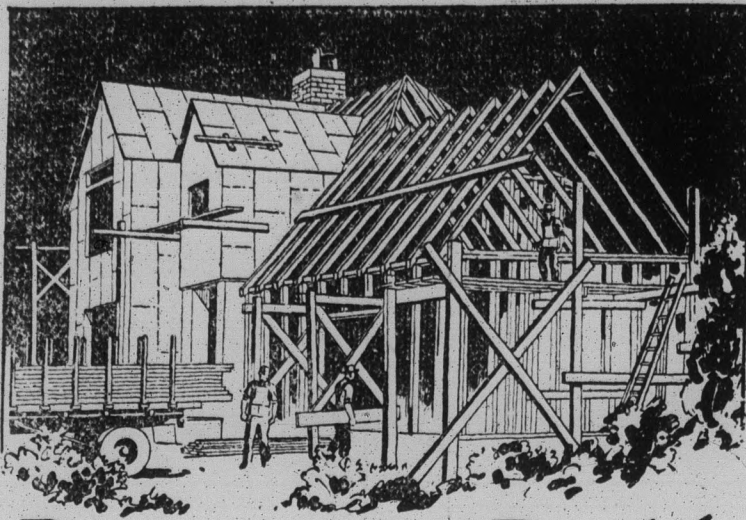

The Federal Government proposes to make each state take care of its own, after next February 1st. It is also noted that 4,000,000 persons who are unemployed are to be turned back to their own state for support, after this date. Without a doubt some of the states will find this a hardship; as for instance thousands are known to have left their state for a new abode in California. They expected us to either give them work or "keep them." The immediate result of making each state take care of its own will be to incite states to act quickly on social insurance schemes in which they will be asked to cooperate when Congress passes enabling legislation. For the employable millions the Public Works Administration will endeavor to provide quick action projects so that to the farthest possible extent the recipients of aid may be at work. Uncle Sam proposes that, if people are to enjoy more of the good things, somebody must produce them and it's up to the different states to have a just share, for they can't be created by Federal Government expenditures much longer and exist.

Putting available capital and idle labor to work and supplying needed goods, foods and equipment, is the winning urge to meet the people's commendation. This is the program which big business has adopted for the new year, and if carried out successfully will alleviate the pain and disappointment that rests so heavily upon the people. Neither must we forget that one of the chief assets to success in business or otherwise, is "good will." There is good will in business and goodwill within you; one is dependent largely upon the other. Man's perspective loans to a successful business; if he succeeds he always helps others besides himself. His influence invites capital and employment. No investment can equal an affable, energetic business man. His good will is the greatest asset in his business. Usually good will is not considered in the accounts or on the books, until a business is to be sold, at which time it becomes tangible and vital. In fact there may be times when good will is almost the sole consideration in the sale of a business.

Imperial Valley is already making preparations for its annual fair, to be held in March. It is surprising how this rare section of out-door country continues to advance, especially since a new order of improvements has been inaugurated. The work on the All-American Canal, America's greatest irrigation system to cost 33 million dollars, holds out the greatest volume of future growth and prosperity for the Valley since it was converted from a desert plain to its present state of development. In a locality which once was a dwelling place for coyotes capering about the chaparral and sage; spiked yucca and barbed cactus, today there are blossoming gardens of surprising wealth. Imperial Valley has gained international fame and people by the thousands have motored Imperial way for a profitable sight-seeing trip. The Imperial County Fair will be held March 9 to 17, inclusive.

The ledger of the past year shows many more gains than losses in the world of private business. This seems hard to believe, after the hectic conditions over which we had no control, yet it should give one a happy thought to know that there is a bracing effect upon our economic upturn. Federal and State financial affairs however present another picture. After an already national budget for 1935-36 asked totals over eight and a half billion dollars, we must face the appalling sum of $34,239,000,000 national debt. Our State deficit is also climbing rapidly from its $30,000,000, and by the end of the biennial period in June 1936, it will be a hundred million at the present rate of government operations. This is enough to threaten the State's security with the danger of bankruptcy unless rigid retrenchment becomes the order of business in Sacramento by the law-makers.

The "Lame Duck" Congress is no longer a statue in the Constitution of the United States. The Twentieth Amendment went into effect with the Seventy-fourth Congress and it is the first time since the First Congress in 1789 when George Washington was chief executive. In other words, these legislators are hot from the polls, two month removed from the hurly-burly of precinct politics. This is a good feature for heretofore members of Congress chosen in November did not take office until December the following year.

"I Caught One That Long"

THIS, gentle readers, is a fish story. Stop us if you've heard it—or if you saw it in the "Finney of the Force" comic strip. Finney, the cop, rushes on the scene of what appears to be the crime of the century. He sees a man on a street corner in broad daylight standing before another man with his hands outstretched in mid-air—just another victim, evidently of the stick-up man. He nails the public enemy. But this time the victim protests. He was just telling about that fish he caught—"one that long!"

"It Tasted Swell!"

Does your husband tell about the fish he ate with the same enthusiasm that he tells about the fish he caught? If not, that's something for you to worry about. Especially if fishing vessels have gone out to far-away waters to catch the very best possible fish, if canners have used every modern method to pack it so that it comes to you with the best fresh fish flavor—then you must cook it so that it's something to talk about. Here are some suggestions for

Some Good Fish Dishes

Salmon with Egg Sauce: Steam one tall can of salmon, open and slide out on a hot platter. Make a white sauce, using two tablespoons butter, two tablespoons flour, the contents of one 6-ounce can of evaporated milk, three-fourths cup water and salt and pepper to taste. Then add two hard-cooked chopped eggs to the sauce and pour over the salmon. This serves four persons.

Lobster and Crab Cocktail: Chill the following ingredients: one-third cup chili sauce, three tablespoons mayonnaise, one-half cup of finely-sliced celery, one-half of a 6-ounce can of lobster, one-half of a 6-ounce can of crabmeat. Beat together the chili sauce and mayonnaise and add the celery. Remove the tendons from the lobster and crab, shred and toss with dressing. Serve in glass cups lined with lettuce leaves. This serves eight persons.

DECEMBER GASOLINE TAX IS $3,324,018.29

Sacramento, January 22—California gasoline taxes for 1934 amounted to $3,324,018.29, marking an increase of $317,702.33 over the corresponding figure for 1933, according to announcement made here today by the State Board of Equalization. This is a gain of 8 percent as contrasted with a loss of 19 percent in 1933, when the total taxes from this source were $39,307,352.99, or $763,985.88 less than in 1932.

December assessments just completed by the State Board have added $3,324,018.29 to the motor vehicle fuel sales previously taxed during the past year. As compared with similar taxes for the last month of 1933, these reveal a gain of $456,494.06, or 1 1/2 percent.

This showing is regarded by the Board as encouraging in view of a loss of 17.07 percent in the taxes for November contrasted with those for November, 1933.

Analyzing trends of the gasoline tax, the Equalization Board states that the highest collections for any calendar year were made in 1931 when they reached a total of $41,625,893.24. In each subsequent year collections from the 3 cents per gallon tax have steadily declined until the year just closed, although in individual months gains have been shown from time to time.

AMERICAN MOTOR SALES ABROAD IN BIG GAIN

American motor vehicles sold outside the United States during 1934 numbered 435,000, states a report to the Automobile club of Southern California. This was a 79 percent increase over 1933 foreign sales and 15 per cent of the United States' total motor vehicle production.

RETAIL SALES and BANK DEBITS SHOW SUBSTANTIAL GAIN

Correlating figures given out by the United States and California departments of agriculture, Bank of America's Business Review, released Tuesday, shows that the farmers of California received 18 percent more for their products in 1934 than in 1933. The figures also show an increase of 45 percent over 1932 and 20 percent over 1931.

The total value of all crops grown in California in 1934 is estimated at $361,063,000, and compares with $305,383,000 in 1933, $248,276,000 in 1932 and $300,608,000 in 1931.

An encouraging factor in the business outlook for 1935 is the official estimate obtained from representative industries that car loadings in the far west, during the first quarter of this year, will exceed the first three months of last year by a margin of five percent.

The improvement in far western business last year is amply demonstrated by a gain of 13.4 percent in bank debits, 10.6 percent in retail sales, and a gain of 2.7 percent in fourth quarter building permits, which checked the downward trend shown earlier in the year. With the exception of September, every month of 1934 showed a gain in employment over the corresponding month of 1933.

CHANWOS MEMBERS TO MEET JAN. 26TH

A meeting of the Retired Officers' Association, headquarters Los Angeles, will be held under the auspices of the San Diego Chanwos club. The meeting will take place on Saturday evening January 26th at 8 p. m., in the El Cortez hotel, San Diego.

Colonel A. T. Marix, U.S.M.C., retired, will address the assembly.

All officers, active and retired, Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Coast Guard, Geodetic Survey and Public Health service and urged to attend.

DECEMBER BEVERAGE TAX IS $106,458.60

Sacramento, January 22—California's 1934 tax on beer and wine at 2 cents per gallon amounted to $106,458.60. This was revealed here today when the State Board of Equalization completed beverage tax assessments for December totaling $106,458.60.

The first taxes levied by the State under this law were for April, 1933, when sales of beverages not exceeding 3.2 percent in alcoholic content were legalized. Thus 1934 is the first complete calendar year during which the tax has been in force. Total levies for the period during which the tax was collected in 1933 were $633,013.72, so that last year's tax marks an increase of $876,218.63.

At first practically all taxable beverage sales were those of beer, according to State Board of Equalization records. Even after repeal of prohibition in December, 1933, the wine sales were accountable for only a small part of the gallonage taxed.

In recent months the volume of wine sold subject to the tax has been steadily increasing. Out of a total of 5,322,930 gallons taxed in December 1,973,328 were wine, representing 37.2 percent of the total.

Consumers of beer and wine in California have indicated a strong preference for local brews and vintages. During the past month 90.9 percent of the beer sold in this state was produced by California breweries. Even a more marked preference was displayed for California wine, which constituted 98 percent of wine sales.

THE THEOSOPHICAL SOCIETY: POINT LOMA

La Fayette Plummer, lecturer at Theosophical University on "The Symbolism of Mathematics" is expected to return to Point Loma tomorrow after a successful lecture tour in the Los Angeles and San Francisco districts.

Plummer will be the speaker at the public forum-lecture at Theosophical headquarters next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock on the subject "What is the technique of spiritual growth?"

Highly commendatory reports of Plummer's lectures in the northern cities have been received by the officers of the Theosophical society of Point Loma. For example, a doctor in Los Angeles wrote:

"Plummer demonstrated on the blackboard the evolution of the Zodiac in geometrical and mathematical formulae. He showed us the march of the triangle from a single geometrical unit into full-orbed universes. He pursued the same modus operandi as a biologist in presenting the growth of the organic world from the division of the single cell, or as the musician his melodies from the undulations of the universal rhythm. Everybody was spell-bound with reverence and wonder. One could almost see the creative forces at work in their detailed activities throughout the cosmic workshops. Next to the music of Beethoven, I never heard or saw anything more fascinating, both to the mind and to the soul. Never to be forgotten!"

LADY PASTOR TALKS TO WCTU

The first monthly meeting of the WCTU of the new year was held in the M. E. church parlors, last Thursday afternoon. In the absence of the president, Mrs. May, Mrs. F. R. Felt presided. There was a good attendance and several visitors present. A very fine program was given. Mrs. Emil, pastor of Central M. E. church, San Diego, lead the devotional service. Several timely and interesting items were read by members. Mrs. Lillian Hartvigsen rendered a beautiful solo "Leave Behind Earth's Empty Pleasures" accompanied by Mrs. Pilcher at the piano. A clever little playlet, "Am I my Brother's Keeper," was given by two ladies from Central M. E. Church, Mrs. Crow and Mrs. Edminstin.

Tea and cake were served by Mrs. Ivy Parks and Mrs. Felt.

Lutheran Mission

"True Christian Faith" will be the subject of next Sunday morning's sermon at the 10:45 o'clock service of the Ocean Beach Lutheran Mission, Newport and Abbott streets. What are the qualities of true Faith? How can I tell if I possess this true faith? These and other questions of importance to all men will be answered and treated of in this subject.

The Sunday School lesson for this Sunday will be "The Daughter of Jairus." That Jesus has power over death and is the Conqueror of death, and that He pities and helps, even in death are the thoughts that will be brought out to the children in their various departments. Send the children so that they might learn more of Jesus, and His great power over death.

A cordial welcome is extended to all to attend these services.

The three settings of this play deserve special mention as examples of what a group of students interested in stagecraft can accomplish. The city drawing room scene is especially worthy of note since the furniture for that scene was built by the students. Salvadore Carlos as chief carpenter for the entire scenery, and Ed Blake as constructor of the rust colored Chesterfield or sofa recommend themselves as highly efficient. The fountain in the garden scene and in fact all the setting was particularly effective.

Joan Foster, Phyllis Mirow, Philip Faulkner, and Eleanore Hicks were active in designing the stage.

Today the Pointer A and B basketball teams journey to La Jolla to meet the Vikings on their courts. The B team has been doing things up brown thus far, winning every game played in the League. The A team has not as yet had a single break. Let us hope this game today puts them off the dead center they seem to have settled upon. Two previous games, because of wet weather, have been played in the gym at San Diego high. Let us hope old Sol will do his stuff soon so that on February 8th, our boys will be able on a dry court at home to meet and ably handle the Army & Navy academy team.

The results of the speed tests in typewriting in the Thursday and Friday assemblies of a week ago were declared before the dismissal of the assemblies. On Thursday the winners and the prizes were as follows:

Second: Joe Sekamota (46 words with 2 errors) five weeks' library pass.

Third: Belle Carey (36 words with 1 error) a three weeks' library pass. The prizes and places on Friday were exactly the same as those of Thursday, but the winners from a different group of students were:

First: Mary Dell Geddes (54 words with 2 errors)

Second: Elaine Kelley (48 words with 2 errors)

Third: Natalie Thompson (44 words with 3 errors)

The commercial assembly proved most interesting and the next announcement of an assembly by that department will be greeted with anticipation.

On their last meeting day, January 16, the Saume Campfire girls of Point Loma High visited various departments of the city government: Park, health department, fire department, city hall, and police department. With their sponsor, Dr. M. Garrett O'Donnell, the following group visited the park: Marjorie Newell, Lois Watson and Ruth O'Donnell. Mrs. C. O. Tanner, sponsor, and Virginia Lillierap, Lucille Sieck, Janice and Joyce Demarest, Wilma Don Herz, Maxine Albrecht, Harriet Werre, and Marjorie Vestal went to the Health department. Patty Stose, Barbara Root, Helen Abel, Esther Price, Phyllis Bowlby and their sponsor, J. H. Bowlby, inspected the police department while Betty Curtis and Virginia Fletcher went to the City hall.

The girls who visited the fire department, Lucille Levin, Pat Buckley, Marion Swanson, Mary Shreve, Edith Jones, with their sponsor, Miss Ethel Henderson, had a special act put on for them by the firemen who invited the group to attend a net-jumping demonstration on January 30, at the tenth and B street station. The girls hope to accept the invitation and take the Aya group with them as guests.

Hints for Homemakers

By Jane Rogers

HERE is some especially cheering news for families that include an aged person, a convalescent or one afflicted in such a way that stair-climbing is painful or dangerous. Residence elevators, once found only in millionaires' mansions, are now being made by a leading manufacturer at a cost no greater than that of a good automobile. The installation is said to be a simple matter, requiring surprisingly few changes in the home. Through the Home Owners' Loan Association it is possible to have the cost of the installation financed.

Have you ever noticed the tiny, low piles that give that rich sheen and soft feel to the mohair velvet upholstery on your furniture or in your car? Proving that little things can add up to amazing totals, it has been estimated that in a single automobile, an average-sized sedan, more than 82 miles of thread are represented by the pile fibres. In textile phraseology, these piles supply "the third dimension," giving mohair velvet fabrics their beauty and durability.

LIVING UP TO THE LAW (Matthew 17-20)

17. Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfil. 18. For verily I say unto you, Till heaven and earth shall pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled. 19. Whosoever therefore shall break one of these least commandments, and shall teach men so, he shall be called the least in the kingdom of heaven: but whosoever shall do and teach them, the same shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven. 20. For I say unto you, That except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven.

CHURCHES OF CHRIST, SCIENTIST

"Truth" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon on Sunday in all Christian Science churches, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass. The Golden Text is from the Psalms: "Teach me thy way, O Lord; I will walk in thy truth: unite my heart to fear thy name."

One of the Scriptural selections in the Lesson-Sermon includes these verses from Luke: "And, behold, there was a woman which had a spirit of infirmity eighteen years, and was bowed together, and could in no wise lift up herself. And when Jesus saw her, he called her to him, and said unto her, Woman, thou art loosed from thine infirmity. And he laid his hands on her: and immediately she was made straight, and glorified God."

Correlative passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, state: "Christian Science is the law of Truth, which heals the sick on the basis of the one Mind or God." "Let us banish sickness as an outlaw, and abide by the rule of perpetual harmony—God's law."

TOPASSORNOTTOPASS

A mistaken assumption of many motorists is that overtaking drivers do not have the right to pass when the car ahead is traveling up to the permissible speed limit, states the National Automobile Club.

The law on the subject speaks pointedly otherwise. An overtaking car is given the right to pass whenever its driver wishes so long as the road is clear. To permit passing under the circumstances, it further states that the first driver shall pull aside at the sound of an overtaking car's horn, with the further proviso, in many cases, that the overtaken vehicle shall not increase its speed.

Morally, the overtaken driver may have a right to be indignant, but legally he has none.

CHAPTER I

It was Armistice day in Tincup. The time was so far removed from that delirious date in 1918 that in many parts of the country the eleventh of November had come to be regarded as simply another day, but Tincup was a mill town and the surrounding country was timber-land and in such a community almost any anniversary from the Fourth of July on down to the millwright's birthday is seized upon as an excuse to lay off and play.

So the camps which turned Nicholas Brandon's standing hardwood and hemlock into saw logs, and the mills which chewed them into dimension stuff and flooring and shingles were deserted, and the entire population of a big territory which had commenced pouring into town the evening before was joined for the day with the residents of Tincup in competing or watching or cheering or listening.

In consequence a mere event such as the arrival of the eastbound passenger train drew no attention whatever and so none but the station agent was there to greet the stranger as he dropped down from the rickety red smoking car between his pack-sack, slung from one shoulder, and old Don Stuart, literally dangling from his other arm. The agent, trundling his express truck and in a hurry to be done with duty and get back to the more exciting affairs which occupied the rest of the town, spoke:

"Hullo, Don! Back home, eh? Well . . . Glad to see you!

"Better git up to the big doin's. Log rollin's just goin' on. Big time!"

As if to vindicate this prideful boast of one of its own, all Tincup and its company at the moment opened lips and compressed chests to send up a mighty, roaring shout of acclaim.

"Come on, Dad," the younger man said, looking toward the crowd. "He says it's a big time. Big noise, anyhow. Let's investigate."

Slowly, then, the sharply contrasting pair moved off, the younger still half supporting the elder and moderating his gait to a stroll so Stuart's quick and audible breathing should grow no more pronounced.

A slender young man was climbing a jammer in the mill yard. He lifted himself above the heads of the crowd and held up a hand for silence. This, however, was not readily obtained. A drenched and dripping citizen was only just pulling himself from the chill waters of the pond, a self-conscious grin glued to his lips as the black hair was plastered to his brow by the soaking it had received. On a peeled cedar log in the pond a giant of a man in a gaily checkered shirt, peavey in his hands, balanced and surveyed the throng, a picture of frank and boastful self-satisfaction.

The slender man on the jammer continued to wave his hands and finally these jibes and compliments were smothered by other cries for silence.

"Give Birney a chanct, now!" a man shouted.

"Gents!" the man called Birney cried from his vantage point. "As chairman of the committee, I'm asking for help! This committee's worked hard. We got a long program of sports for today but this log-birling's going to flop unless we get more contests! All these folks noyed and took no pains to conceal it. "Ain't any of you lads got the sand to hand in your names and tackle the Bull. Where's your guts?" he pleaded. "Ain't there anybody here that needs twenty-five dollars?"

Another laugh went up and when it had subsided a voice said:

"Here's one. What'll I do to get it?"

This was a full, even, good-natured voice, and a quick silence fell upon the crowd, followed by an expectant buzz as the stranger moved forward, his bronzed face uplifted to the man on the jammer.

"Atta boy!" Birney cried. "All you got to do, friend, is to put Mr. Bull Duval off that log and stick by rules!"

The stranger slipped the pack strap from his shoulder, seated himself on a log, unlaced his shoes and unstrapped the bag. While he drew from its depths a pair of calked river boots and the cluster about him grew thicker a half dozen old men crowded around Don Stuart, shaking his hand and saying the usual things that men say to an old friend they have not seen for long.

One of these was a short, wiry little man with upturned nose and blue eyes and long lip.

"Nd who's th' b'y, Donny?" he asked. "Who's th' b'y that's goin' to try Mister Brandon's pet bull?"

Stuart shook his head.

"He's a fine young gentleman, Bird-Eye, and that's all I know. Found me at th' Junction . . . broke and wanted to . . . get back home to Tincup. Paid my fare . . . and helped me. Fine gentleman!"

"He'd better be all o' that!" the other commented with an emphatic nod. "Nd here's hopin' he's a log rollin' rascal nd that he dumps Mister Brandon's bull nd thin drowns him, so I do!"

Others came up, greeted Stuart and eyed him with true concern. Any one could see that heavy sickness was on him. Birney was bending over the stranger as he drew taut the laces of his river boots.

"Well, gents, we got one more to try for this prize money. Mister Bull Duval, king of the Mad Woman mill, now take on Mister Ben Elliott . . . Mr. Ben Elliott of—Where'd you say you come from, Elliott?"

The stranger, so addressed, was hefting a peavey judiciously. He turned that good-natured smile on the spokesman and waved one hand in an indefinite but inclusive gesture.

"Yonder," he said and grinned.

"Mr. Ben Elliott of Yonder will now roll against Mr. Bull Duval for the grand prize of twenty-five bucks! That rope around the log marks the middle, Elliott. Stay on your own end, don't touch the other man and anything else goes!"

As a helper used a pike pole to drag the cedar with Duval upon it close, Elliott stood still and surveyed his adversary. His glance held that light of good nature and did not linger long on the Bull's glowering countenance.

Rather, it dwelt on his pants and the river boots, shedding water in oily beads. After this, he looked Duval in the eye and grinned broadly.

A sound like a reath which is almost a laugh ran through the crowd. A likeable grin, that was, good-natured, frank, fearless; men take to a grin of its kidney and in the instant, Ben Elliott, the stranger, had the crowd with him as against Bull Duval, said to be king of the river.

The cedar came against the boom stick and Elliott took his place on it with a light leap. It was a good log, nearly two feet through at the small end, twenty feet long, with a small taper, dry and peeled; a sprightly log, indeed, for such a contest, a log to try the mettle of any man matched with any sort of contestant. Add to this, Bull Duval, the best river hog in Tincup, who hefted his peavey and glowered at the stranger.

"I give y' two minutes," he growled. "Thanks, buddy!" Elliott retorted. "I say that's sweet of you!"

"Are you two ready?" Birney cried from shore.

Both nodded.

"Then let her go!"

A hush. Balanced on the log, faced in the same direction, double an arm's length from one another, they poised. And then Duval's right toe lifted the heel pressing downward; the buoyant log moved quickly. His left foot raised free, sharp corks in its sole clawed savagely and with a mighty drive of the leg he had the cedar spinning beneath them.

Ben Elliott did not offer resistance. He followed the moving footing, walking for the first three or four turns and then, adding his impetus to the birling stick, commenced to trot, with each stride forcing the tempo of the turning.

Faster and faster, now. The trotting became a run; the run waxed to a nimble dance.

They watched one another. Ben Elliott still grinned. The Bull glared. His black brows were drawn together and he ground down on his chew savagely, almost hatefully.

Up and down, up and down; a mad gallop of supple limbs, now and then—Duval leaped. He leaped high and without warning and, feet spread, drove his corks deep into the log again, hunching his shoulders, thrusting his peavey before him for balance, bending forward. The spin of the stick was checked sharply and had his opponent been caught unprepared, he certainly would have pitched face foremost into the pond.

But Elliott was not unprepared. He had watched the Bull's every move. He did not jump when Duval jumped; he waited a split instant, eyes on Duval's feet, and when he saw the toes pointed stiffly downward he rose nimbly into the air, a galloping break in his swift run, and came down, poised, spread-legged himself, crying out in an ejaculation of mock distress as he balanced on the cedar which swayed and heaved beneath them.

A great roar went up, cries of en-sharply and spat and jerked at the brim of his slouch hat as he shook loose the peavey and commenced again to birl.

They ran a moment easily, each waiting for the other to try some fresh trick. The Bull leaped and came down running; he leaped four times in the space of as many quick breaths. And then, as though ready to leap again, dropped the hook of his peavey into the cedar. He wavered when the handle, swept upward by the rush and weight of the spinning log, bore against his great palm. His body swung sharply to the left. He cursed as the smooth handle slipped from his clutch and Bird-Eye Blaine danced in a frenzy of delight as the peavey, handle smack ing the water, disappeared in the pond and the Bull, waving his arms for balance, ran the log desperately to hold his place. A great shout went up from the crowd.

The odds, then, were no longer equal. Like a fencer with a broken foil, like a boxer with one eye closed, like a runner with a strained tendon, so Duval was now.

"Polish him off, now!" Bird-Eye screamed, like an audacious, saucy boy. "Polish him good, Mister Elliott! He's yawpin' for help nd the ain't none fer him!"

That was what Tincup believed. A quick finish seemed certain, with the Bull so handicapped, without his peavey for offensive moves or to hold for balance.

But what happened stilled the clamor quickly, as though sound were a tangible mass and a great blade had sheared it quickly and cleanly.

Ben Elliott shifted his peavey. He had held it across his body, arms wide

"I've come to town more to see this match than anything else on the card and what I've showed 'em?"

"Why, nothin'!" he answered his own question. "We had two preliminaries and a semi-final between the winners of other matches. Then this final which was a joke. There stands Bull Duval, whose partner in the preliminaries defaulted and who dumped the winner of the semi-final without half trying. I ask you, has he earned twenty-five dollars?"

A laugh arose and Duval, on the log, twisted his mustache and leered at the speaker.

"Here we raised a twenty-five dollar prize and half you river hogs got cold feet just because Duval said he was goin' to roll!" Birney was truly an

TRUE DETECTIVE STORY

by Vance Wynn © Public Ledger

Tale of the Poisoned Dagger

THIRTY years ago a number of men and women were murdered in the suburbs near Shanghai.

It was discovered that most of the victims had been killed by means of a poisoned dagger.

At the same time chapels and churches belonging to the foreign missionary societies were destroyed.

Demands for satisfaction came from state departments in all parts of the world, and as a consequence the Chinese government endeavored to ascertain the culprits and to punish them.

The official placed in charge of the investigation was Foo Wang, who at the time enjoyed the reputation of being the Sherlock Holmes of China.

He was patient, he was resourceful, and he never went after "his man" without getting him.

One of the things he found near the scene of the crimes was a bit of calico stamped with a number of Chinese characters.

He knew that it was a certificate of membership in a famous secret society known as the Ko Lao Hui.

This society was originally formed to battle with Chinese officials who practiced extortion upon the natives—and they were as numerous as the autumn leaves in Vallambrosia—but later its objects became anti-foreign and anti-missionary.

Foo Wang went to his home and got out his great pipe and sat down and thought.

And he finally came to the conclusion that the particular bit of calico that he had picked up belonged to Chen-kin-Lung, who was one of the most conspicuous of the Ko Lao Hui leaders.

China is a pretty big place, but Foo Wang had plenty of assistants to rely upon, and he sent them to the four corners of the Celestial empire with instructions to locate the supposed leader.

Eventually he discovered that the man he wanted was at an inn near Peking, and that with him were about twenty of his followers.

Foo Wang decided that it was about time for a round-up and he gathered his men together for that purpose.

He found the leader in one of the rooms of the place giving an entertainment to his supporters.

The Chinese detective was nothing if not original.

He posted himself upon the veranda of the inn and then sent one of his men in to tell Chen-kin-Lung that he was wanted outside on important business.

The unsuspecting leader excused himself to his friends with true celestial gravity and stepped out on the veranda.

As he did so a great bag was thrown over his head, two men seized him and he was carried, kicking and gesticulating, to a nearby wharf and placed on a vessel.

There, bound and gagged, he was taken in the direction of Shanghai.

Just before the boat reached its destination the detectives brought the suspect into the cabin and put him through the third degree—which means something in China.

But while Chen-kin-Lung might have been down he was far from being out.

He smiled his inscrutable smile—and said nothing.

They literally put the screws upon him but failed to elicit the slightest information.

His clothing and effects were now brought to the detective and given a careful examination.

In the flowing sleeves of one of his kimonos was found a dagger with a poisoned blade.

It had the appearance of being the weapon with which the Shanghai murders had been committed.

Also the investigators found a number of letters and communications addressed to the prisoner.

In each of them he was addressed as the "Eighth Great Prince."

This was proof positive that he was at the head of the secret society and that he undoubtedly aimed at securing the control of the country.

Among the other things found were a number of the calico certificates indicating membership in the Ko Lao Hui.

Koo Wang now had more than enough evidence to send his distinguished prisoner to the block.

But he wanted to get the names of others and he besought the prisoner to make a clean breast of the whole conspiracy.

But Chen-kin-Lung was a wise Chinaman and he knew that he was sure to be beheaded.

So he remained silent. He was returned to the hold of the vessel and told that he would be given until the next morning to make a complete revelation of his mysterious society.

But the next morning he was gone—mysteriously—and nothing was ever heard of him afterward.

Mothers who like to dress their small daughters after the simple smart English manner will love this design. At first glance, nice as it looks, there seems to be very little to it. And the side pleats, which make it such a pleasant frock in which to romp are also decorative in a charmingly discreet manner. The sleeves may be long or short, and a hidden charm is a pair of more than ordinarily well-cut bloomers. Make it of cotton or sheer wool.

Father Neptune Pictured as Both Friend and Foe

The sea is at one and the same time Holland's foe and friend. The ever-present menace of breaking dikes hangs constantly over the heads of the country's placid burghers. Perpetual vigilance is a necessity. Without it more than half of Holland's population of 8,000,000 might at any time be swallowed up by the sea.

At the same time, the canals, which have been built in the progress of reclaiming the land, provide Holland with the cheapest and most effective system of transportation. Today about two-thirds of the country's transportation of goods is by water. As a means of protection against invasion from an outside enemy, the sea also is Holland's most effective ally. In 1672 the armies of France, England and a part of Germany, at war with the republic of the Seven States of the Netherlands, marched on Holland. They would have succeeded in taking the capital but for a flood artificially created to stop the invasion of the enemy. At the beginning of the great European war in 1914, everything had been prepared to flood a part of the country in the event of Holland being compelled to take part in the war. It is related that years ago, long before the World war, the queen of Holland visited her neighbor, the then German Kaiser, at Potsdam. In honor of the distinguished visitor a review was held of the Kaiser's famous bodyguard. The Kaiser, with a significant side glance at the queen of Holland, is reported to have said, "The soldiers of my bodyguard are all six feet tall." Whereupon the queen is said to have answered, "That is just two feet short of the depth of the water with which I can flood Holland."

ROY G. MITCHELL, Manager

The Conscientious Candidate

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

Sitting by himself in a hotel room I found an old friend of earlier days, chewing a toothpick, and gloomily regarding a cheering crowd outside the open window where a man was standing in an automobile and addressing an obviously approving crowd.

"Is that your candidate?" I inquired.
"Not any more," was the surly reply.

"I thought you were one of his managers."

"Listen. That lad hasn't got any managers. I was one, but I ain't any more, and moreover, I won't be. I'm waiting for the next train that will take me back home."

"What was the trouble?"
"It would take more than between now and train time to tell you. That fellow hasn't got any political brains. I was up all night last week, writing him a speech—the regular speech that used to go big in all the campaigns I've been in. When I showed it to him, he read it, believe it or not, read every line of it, and then he said:

"But you've made a lot of promises here that I can't carry out. Nobody could carry them out. Don't you realize that I'd be expected to carry them out if I was elected?"

"Listen," I said, "you're new in this game, but you're smart, or any way I think you are, and you can learn. Nobody pays any attention to campaign promises except a few cranks, and they won't bother you after election day. You'll have a secretary to keep them from bothering you."

"What you've got to do is to let us old hands tell you what kind of promises will get votes, and then go and make them, and take the bows. You just attend to the talking—you're good at that—and we'll get somebody up from headquarters to hand you the speeches. The ones you've been writing ain't sound. You keep talking about not being able to perform impossibilities. That won't make you any votes. Now, don't worry, it will be all right; you just leave that speech with me and I'll leave in it anything that ought to be there, and let one of the bright lads I've brought along fix the rest of it for you."

"But," he says, "I wouldn't make a speech that somebody else wrote for me."

"You wouldn't, hey," I says. "Well, smarter guys than you has made 'em and grabbed off big jobs by makin' 'em, and after they were elected they managed to squirm out of 'em, like they all do."

"But that wouldn't be honest," he says.

"It wouldn't be stealin', or burglarin', would it?"

"Pretty much the same thing, yes."

"Now, what could you do with a bird like that?"

"Well, what did you do with him?"
"There wasn't nothing to do, of course, but just let him take the bit in his mouth. And a terrible mess he's made of it."

"Why, do you know the very next day he told a crowd out in front of the hotel that when he was elected he wanted 'em to come down to the Capitol and tell him if there was anything wrong with the way things was going, and if they had any complaints, and so forth. What do you think of that? After he was elected mind you. He'd listen to 'em after he had the job and didn't need to listen to 'em."

"I sat down then and tried to have a serious talk with him, and explain that nobody ever took campaigns seriously, and that he was to leave what happened after he was elected to older and wiser heads that had grown gray in politics."

"He was a little huffy at that, but I thought he could take his medicine, even if it didn't taste good, and set to work tellin' him, as I would tell a little child, what it was all about. And what does he do but turn on his heel and walk off!"

"The next morning I went up to his room, where he was makin' a lot of party leaders—poor old boys past fifty—chuck one of them medicine balls at each other just because he liked to get exercise that way."

"He was all smiles when he see me, and chucked the ball at me, meanin' to be playful, and it hit me on the ear and hurt. But I was so pleased to think he'd come around to my way of thinking that I didn't say anything till the other boys had gone.

"Then I said: 'Well, I see you ain't mad any more, so I suppose it's all right.'"

"You suppose what's all right?" says he.

"Why, the quarrel between you and me. I knew you wouldn't take that serious."

"No," he says, "I didn't take it serious. Here's another speech I wrote this morning. He handed it to me, and I put on my spectacles to read it, and found he'd said again that when he was elected he was going to be the people's man, and that the first professional politician who came to him to give advice or offer instructions would be chucked out of the window."

"Well, I just turned on my heel and walked away. Here am I, an out there is he, givin' a talk to the people about the danger of trick politicians comin' into the offices and tryin' to influence elected officials, and how, if he was elected, the first thing he'd do would be to try to get to ask for a law makin' attempts to influence an official a felony. A felony! Think of that!"

"What are you going to do about it?" I inquired, as he paused to catch his breath.

"Well, the trouble is, we can't do nothing about it. We ain't got nothing on him like we have with a good many of the men we nominate. He ain't made us no promises, which mebbe was our fault, for we thought he'd be so glad to have us tell him what to do that he'd come in askin' for advice every day."

"It's too late to head him off now, and the worst thing about it is, he's makin' headway, and maybe will get elected in spite of all we can do to stop him, and that'll be a lot, believe me."

"Look at him, out there, tellin' 'em he won't make no promises unless he knows he can carry them out, he won't have no boss directin' him in the discharge of his duty to the people, and he thinks the mandate of the people is more important than the orders of all the political bosses that ever put their heads together in a back room."

"I suppose we got it comin' to us. We nominated him; because we took it for granted that he'd be a good boy and do what was right. But we have learned our lesson. He'll probably be elected, for he goes good with the crowd, and he may get re-nominated—such fellows do, sometimes. But when he quits, and we put in another man, that man is goin' to be our man, and he's goin' to admit it in writin' before he gets his name so much as mentioned in the convention hall."

A sound of loud cheers came through the open window. The old politician grinned. "He's had business for us," he said. "But I can't help admirin' his nerve, at that."

Crocheted Edges and Insertions

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK

There are so many articles in the home that require an edging that needleworkers always want books on the subject so they can refer to them when looking for a dainty narrow edge for handkerchiefs, or a wide edge for spreads, scarfs, etc. The edges shown here are narrow for handkerchiefs and give you an idea of the beauty in handsome edgings.

Book No. 26 in Crocheted Edges and Insertions contains 72 patterns from which to select when an edging is wanted. A few motifs are also included for corners in napkins or tablecloths. The designs are old and new and illustrated in full size, with instructions.

Send 15c to our Crochet Department for this book No. 26, if you crochet and appreciate beautiful edgings.

PERHAPS MARINA HAD HER FINGERS CROSSED, ANYWAY

Brides married in the Church of England or the Protestant Episcopal Church of America have not had to promise to obey their husbands for the last six years. The so-called non-conformist creeds of England and America have not insisted on inclusion of the word in their ceremonies for an even longer period.

Roman and Greek Catholics, however, do not deviate from the older forms. Princess Marina of Greece and the duke of Kent were married under the rites of both the Anglican and Orthodox churches. Thus she swore to "love, honor, and cherish" in one language, to "love, honor, and obey" in another.

At the rehearsal of the Greek rites, the Orthodox deacon approached the princess and told her quietly in Greek, "the Greek church does not permit me to omit the word 'obey' from the ceremony."

"But leave that to me," he said, "I shall pronounce the ceremony in such a low voice when it comes to the word 'obey,' the duke will never be able to hear me."

"Never mind," said the princess, smiling, "make it as loud as you wish. It's all Greek to George, anyway."

One might add that "obey," for which the Greeks, too, seem to have a word, has not been literally interpreted by either brides or bridegrooms for a long time before the prayer books were revised in 1928, else they had not been revised even now.—Literary Digest.

Can Become Tiresome
Being what one's friends call a good scout is sometimes very tiring.

COUNTERFEIT MONEY

To prevent its clerks from accepting these and other bogus bills, the Post Office department described a method of detecting counterfeit bills—a method that every shrewd passer of the "queer" already knew, says Time Magazine. The method: Divide the serial number on every bill (except a national banknote) by 6. Compare the remainder with the tiny letter in the lower right corner. If the remainder is

1. " " " " A or G
2. " " " " B or H
3. " " " " C or I
4. " " " " D or J
5. " " " " E or K
6. " " " " F or L

If the letter is not correct, the note is counterfeit. But even if it is, the bill may still be counterfeit.

Safe on Earth

A pedestrian crossed a traffic-filled street while looking up at an airplane overhead. Three buses shaved him so closely that his beard didn't appear again for a week, the wild from six passing cars raised the nap on his last year's suit, one five-passenger car removed the shine from the back of his left shoe, and the drivers of seven others of assorted makes, while stripping their gears in an effort to avoid him, also stripped their vocabularies of every known high-powered adjective. After stumbling over the curbstone on the further side of the road the pedestrian was heard to murmur: "My gracious, those aviators lead dangerous lives.—Utica Observer Dispatch.

WARREN WALKER SCHOOL

With the beginning of the new semester, the seventh and eighth grade classes of the Warren Walker school will move back to the former quarters in the Kraft building. The school has grown so that a larger number of rooms is needed for the kindergarten and elementary grades.

A student reporter is to be appointed. The reporter may choose any phase of the work on week's happenings he thinks is of interest.

The students of the Warren-Walker school have been discussing the Exposition to be held in San Diego this summer.

Wednesday morning we had a surprise when Gloria Johnson brought five beautiful pictures consisting of the Enchanted Island, Mexican Village, Mining Camp, House of Hospitality and Exposition Palisades.

The midget colony that is to be brought from the Century of Progress is of much interest. The smallest midget is only eighteen inches high and the mayor, who is sixty-five years of age, is forty-four inches tall. A most surprising fact is that their children are almost always normal size.

The midgets live just as we do. They have barber shops, beauty shops and homes, only theirs are much smaller.

MILLION AND A HALF MOTOR TOURISTS A YEAR

A total of 795,163 persons entered Southern California through the eastern gateways in 289,560 automobiles last year, representing an increase of 5.7 per cent in motor tourists over 1933.

This optimistic situation is shown in reports received by the Automobile club of Southern California from the state Department of Agriculture. A large part of this travel represents California tourists returning to their home state, yet incoming cars carrying licenses of other states and countries increased 10.9 per cent over 1933 to a total of 136,521 last year. The total travel coming into Southern California from the north is not counted, but it is felt certain that several hundred thousand tourists' machines at least, came south via the coastal highways. This is partly indicated by the incoming travel count for the entire state, which showed 1,573,542 passengers in 592,135 cars for 1934. This was a 15.5 per cent gain in cars, 7.6 per cent in passengers.

"Foreign" cars, or those registered in other states and lands, increased by 13 per cent in the total state travel to a count of 272,182.
